

“I want to social distance from my eating disorder”

I have struggled with an eating disorder and other mental health issues since I was in elementary school. Being in quarantine has exacerbated a lot of these problems, and writing about my experience has been extremely cathartic. My hope is that these words will bring a small sense of relief to others as well. I hope that people who are struggling right now know that they are not alone.